

Registered Veterinary Technicians

What's great about veterinary nursing careers at The Ohio State University Veterinary Medical Center?

As a veterinary nurse within The Ohio State University Veterinary Medical Center (VMC), you'll practice at the top of your license in a highly supportive environment, while collaborating with a diverse and talented team dedicated to providing the highest quality, comprehensive care to help animals live their best lives.

Nursing opportunities can be found throughout our veterinary hospital network, comprised of a newly built primary care clinic, specialty companion animal hospitals – located in Columbus and Dublin – and our farm and equine hospitals.

As in human medicine, VMC veterinary care services cover the full spectrum, from primary care and urgent care, to advanced specialty care, providing you the opportunity to work with multiple specialties and services. We also offer a full suite of ancillary services including radiology and diagnostic imaging, anesthesia, clinical and anatomical laboratories, and a full-service pharmacy.

As part of the VMC, you'll be supported by a comprehensive team of veterinary assistants and customer service team members as you provide best-in-class care to patients alongside clinical faculty and residents specializing in advanced care. You can also take pride in knowing you play an integral role in the education of our professional students, who are tomorrow's veterinarians!
